The Supreme Court Dismisses His Petition

BARKWORTH VS. TATEUM

Parties Are Not Before the Court. A Pretty Nest Let-Down.

Lassino. April 14.—The supreme court handed down an opinion in the mandamus cases of Barkworth vs. Ta teum and Turnbull vs. The Lieutenant Governor. The opinion is as follows by McGrath, J.—These causes may be considered together. The relator in the first case is a member of the senate, respondent, Giddings, is lieutenring governor and ex-officio president of the senate, and respondent, Alward, is the secretary of the senate.

The relator in the other case is a

The relator in the other case is a member of the house of representatives; respondent Tateum is also a member of the house and speaker thereof, and respondent Miller is clerk of that body. Senator Turnbull, on the 15th day of February, 1833, asked leave to present a protest against certain proceedings of the senate, and to have the same spread on the journal, but the president of the senate, respondent Giddings, ruled that the protest offered was out of order, as reflecting on the honor of the senate. The decision of the protest of the p the president was appealed from, on the ground that the ruling was "contrary to the constitutional guarantee." Upon vote taken the ruling of the president was sustained. On February 2, 1893, during a session of the house of representatives, the relator in the second case. Representative Barkworth, presented his protest against the passage of a certain resolution, but the passage of a certain resolution, but the speaker, Relator Tateum, declared the protest to be out of order, as reflect-ing on the house, and refused to receive or print the same in the Journal. Mr. Barkworth appealed from the de-cision of the speaker, on the ground that the ruling was "con-trary to the constitutional guaran-tee." Upon a vote had by yeas and nays the decision of the speaker was sustained. On the third day of March following Mr. Bark-worth re-offered his protest, but the worth re-offered his protest, but the speaker repeated his ruling and the same was not received, and thereupon Mr. Barkworth requested Respondent Miller to receive said protest and print the same as a part of the journal; but said Miller, "relying upon the decision of the said speaker of the house, refused and neglected to offer the protest." Orders to show cause were issued, and respondents appear without answer and move to dismiss the proceedings.

The motion to dismiss must be granted. Section 10 of article 4 of the constitution provides that "each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish the same, except such parts as may require secrecy. The yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall be entered on the journal at the request of one fifth of the members elected. Any member of either house may dissent from and protest against any act, proceeding or resolution which he may deem injurious to any person of the public, and have the reason of his dissent entered on the journal." It will be observed that the constitu-tion imposes the duty of keeping the journal upon the house and not upon sident or speaker, secretary or clerk. In both cases an appeal to the house was taken, and each house adopted the ruling of their representative officers. refusing to receive the protest or to print it in the journal. It is true that the rules make it the duty of the secre-tary and the clerk to keep the journal, but this is not a delega-tion of the control of the journal to either officer. The rules also provide for the reading of each day's journal for the reading of each day's journal and the correctness thereof. The cor-rections are made at the instance and direction of the body to which the journal is read. The duty imposed by the rules is the mere clerical duty of placing upon the journal such matter as each house may determine shall be placed thereupon. The secretary and clerk are therefore the mere creatures of the respective bodies. It is not sought by the proceeding to reach something which is in the possession of the agent who defends his possession by setting up title in his principal, nor is it a proceeding to restrain an agent from doing an unlawful act under an order from his principal and who sets up the immunity of his superior. It is not the existence in another of more interest that is here pleaded. It is affirmative action that is sought to be enforced and it is want or power to comply with or give effect to an order if made, that is passed. It is sought to compel persons whose duties are puzely clerical to perform duties which are imposed upon their superiors. We are asked to compel the secretary of the senate and clerk of the house to insert in the journals matter which the senate and house have not only refused to al low to be printed therein, but have refused to consider and receive. The writ of mandamus neither creates nor confers authority upon the officer to who it is directed. It merely directs the exercise of existing powers. It should be directed to those who are to execute it or whose duty it is to do the thing required. It must also clearly appear that the person to whom the has the absolute power to execute it, otherwise it will not be issued. that the person to whom directed Moses on Mand, 129, High on Ex-Legal Rem. S. 32; Merrill on Mand. sections 57, 58, 60, and cases cited. The duty exught to be enforced is imposed by the constitution upon the senate and house, and those bodies hav ing refused to receive or enter the protests, neither the president of the senata nor the speaker of the house has the power, without the concurrence of the sty over which he presides, to execute order if made restions raped. Insertuch as the proper parties are not before the court, the proceedings must be dismissed and the write denied but without costs.

AN INTERESTING WOMAN.

The Brilliant Society Editor of a Cinclenati Paper.

Mrs. C. A. R. Deveroux, the brilliant society editor of the Cinciunati Commercial fiazette, lives on West Fourth street, where, until recently, when three weddings of her children followed in quick succession, she was surrounded by an interesting family. Only wee, dainty Marion, who is yet a bud, remains in this home of refinement.

Born in Boston, brought up in an atmosphere of culture, invited to read at morning symposiums papers that found their way into print, it is hard to say when Mrs. Devereux first began to write for the newspapers. But the first real work, about five years after her marringe to General Devereux in the seventies, was for the Boston Advertiser. Her next work was for The Courier of that

It has been only a few years since women begun to be appreciated as journalists, and on the removal of General Devereux to Cincinnati in 1876 she began to write feature articles for The Gazette, using the nom de plume of Clare de Vere, and for The Commercial, where her initials, D'Arc, reversed, were used. Soon after her advent in Cincinnati journalism she was given the art assignments and then society work. The Sunday paper had grown, and with it the society column, and on the consolidation of The Commercial Gazette Mrs. Devereux was made society editor, and she enjoys the distinction of being the first woman employed in any capacity on the Cincinnati papers. To define it what particular Mrs. Deverenx attracts you is an impossibility, but as you enter her door something in the sincere hospitable greeting makes you feel you are really wel-come to this retreat, with its quaint furnishings, all in such artistic confusion.

In appearance Mrs. Devereux is of medium height, rather stout, but her carriage is so dignified it gives you the impression she is quite tall. The expression of her face is forceful, and in her profile the angle of intellect is clearly defined. She is bright and witty in conversation, is well versed in all branches of newspaper work and wields a ready, trenchant pen. Mrs. Devereux is a fine linguist. Her fads! Ah, yes, women all have fads nowadays, but to see her in her home one need not ask that question. It is one any woman ought to be proud to own-her home and the comforts of her MARIE E. ISLER

A Novel Recipe Book. A small book is easily made of Watman's heavy water color paper by drawing a design of a fish, as shown in the illustration, or of an orange, a lemon, potato, apple or any fruit or vegetable in frequent use for the table. When well drawn, color this design with water color paint, directly from the object or from a good copy. A dozen or more leaves may be cut of smooth white letter paper, without lines, to fit the cover and inserted as leaves to the book by means of two holes pierced through the whole with a penknife, after which daisy ribbon is to be drawn through these and tied in a jaunty little bowknot on top.

The little book is now in readiness to receive its contents, which should be well tried and thoroughly tested recipes for the use of the fruit or vegetable designated by the cover. These may be writ-
